

The Daily Courant.

Wednesday, July 24. 1706.

From the Paris Gazette, dated July 24.

Venice, July 3.

THE Duke of Vendome, besides the Beacons which he has caus'd to be set up at proper Distances along the Adige, has directed Rockers to be prepar'd at Lacize on the Edge of the Lake of Garda, to be let off for Signals to the Count de Medavi who is on the other side of that Lake in the Bressan: And has order'd that Count when he shall see those Rockets in the Air, to embark his Troops and make all the haste he can with them to the Mincio, whither the Sieur Dillon is to repair likewise with those he commands. Prince Eugene continues encamp'd between San-Michele and San-Martino: He has receiv'd all the Reinforcements he expected, except the Troops of Hesse-Cassel. Som Days ago Cardinal Grimani arriv'd here, and so Da. will go on board a Galley of the Republick that is to carry him to Ravenna, whence he will proceed to Rome. Since he came hither, he has had a Conference with Prince Eugene, who came secretly to the Imperial Ambassador's Palace.

From the Amsterdam Gazette, dated July 30.

Venice, July 17. We have receiv'd Advice that the Duke of Orleans is come to Milan, having in his Way stop'd 2 or 3 Days at the Camp before Turin, where he gave Money to the Soldiers and Pioneers, to encourage them to carry on the Works. The Marquis de Grancey, Brother of the Count de Medavi, is gone to meet that Prince and conduct him to the Army he is to command, which he will find in a different Situation from what it was a few Days ago. Since we receiv'd the first News of Prince Eugene's moving towards the lower Adige, we have Advice, that the 9th in the Night the Imperialists made 4 false Attacks; the first on the Intrenchments between the Town of Garda and the Adige, the second at Panton, where they got together some Barks, as if they design'd to make a Bridge there; the third at San Porcratio, and the fourth at Zevio; and in all those Places there was Cannonading and Firing of small Shot on both Sides. Upon the first motion of the Imperialists, the Signals concert'd by the French were given all along the Adige and on the Lake of Garda, and their Troops hasten'd to their appointed Rendezvous. The 10th in the Morning some Germans appear'd about Riva, as if they intended to pass towards Lodrone. In the mean time Prince Eugene who had left the Command of the Troops encamp'd at San Michele and San Martino to the Prince of Anhalt, and was gone with the Princes of Wirtemberg and Elbeuf, and the Marquis of Langalerie, towards Castalbado and Lendenara, pass'd the Canal Bianco at Pixon. Letters from Rovigo of the 14th tell us the Imperialists that were come into the Polesines were reforc'd to 12000 Men. P. S. We have Advice, that the 14th in the Night the French drew off the Troops they had in their Intrenchments along the Adige, and are retir'd towards Isola della Scala, whither the Duke of Vendome has caus'd the Gros of his Army to march, with design 'tis suppos'd to retire over the Mincio, and there intrench himself, he having already caus'd 2 Bridges to be laid over that River. Hereupon the Imperialists have laid a Bridge on the upper Adige, to march over with the rest of their Troops, and have detach'd a Body of Men to pass the Po.

Letters of the 17th from Milan, say an Account was come thither, that the Duke of Vendome was encamp'd behind the Mincio, and had fix'd his Head Quarters at Castiglione delle Stivere.

From the Leiden Gazette, dated July 30.

Rastad, July 24. The Night between the 19th and 20th of this Month, the French on a sudden made a terrible Fire from their Artillery of Fort-Louis, upon the little Island out Men were posses'd of very near that Place; this they did to facilitate the Passage of a good Body of Troops which they had put into Boats to attack the said Island: Colonel Driboth whom Prince Lewis of Baden had posted on it, with 3 Battalions of the Troops of the Circle of Franconia made a great Fire with Cannon and Musquets, from a Fort that was rais'd there, and (as is said) sunk one of the Boats and kill'd or wounded 1100 Men; but he had 1 Captain, 2 Lieutenants, 2 Ensigns, and 38 Soldiers kill'd, and 70 Men wounded among them 2 Captains, and was at length oblig'd to abandon the Island, and retire to this side of the Rhine with the rest of his Men: It was done however in good Order. By the taking of this Island, the Enemy have recover'd a free Navigation of the River between Strasbourg and Fort-Louis, and have also depriv'd us of the Means of bombarding the last Place. Their Army is mov'd up higher, whereupon Prince Lewis has caus'd the Foot that were near Stohlhoffen to march up to Hugelshym to observe them.

From the Paris Gazette, dated July 24.

HIS Majesty being inform'd that a great number of Vagabonds and loose Idle Persons have dispers'd themselves into the Provinces of Champagne and Brie, and even into the Generality of Paris, by Force and Arms committing not only the Crime of Fausse saunage (or of vending Salt, which ought to sold only out of the King's Store-houses,) but all manner of Disorders: And considering of what Importance it is to put a stop to this Enterprize; his Majesty commands and orders the Governours and Lieutenant Generals of his said Provinces, the Governours of particular Towns and Places, and the Intendants of the said Generalities of Paris and Chalons, to give necessary Orders in all the Cities, Towns, Villages, Parishes, and Communities within their respective Jurisdictions, that the said Vagabonds be seiz'd wherever they are found, and those that shall be taken deliver'd into the Hands of the Provosts Marshals, to be tried by martial Law according to the Rigour of the Ordinances. Moreover, his Majesty most expressly enjoys the Provosts of Provincial Marshal- fees, and others residing in the said Provinces, their Lieutenants, and other Officers, each within his District with their Archers, to make search for and apprehend the said Vagabonds, on the Penalty of being depriv'd of their Salaries. Lastly, His Majesty forbids all Owners of Ferry Boats or Wherries us'd for passing Rivers, and all Ferry-men Watermen, and others, to carry or suffer to pass over any of the said Vagabonds, on Pain of Corporal Punishment.
